Shortly after completing his service with the military as both an enlisted man and officer, Scott started in the residential construction industry in 2002 as a construction manager. Spending several years managing the construction of multiple homes simultaneously, he did so in a manner which earned him some of the highest scores within JD Powers and Associates surveys. His ability to initiate and maintain a consistent rapport with home owners facilitated a genuine satisfaction amongst them.

Ever looking to improve upon the level of skill and complexity it takes to build 20 semi custom and custom homes, he soon began building with HHN in the River Oaks/Upper Kirby and Medical Center communities. Relishing in the experience of building in the River Oaks community for which he lives in, he was soon given the opportunity to build a home for Jane Moore, the owner of Jane Moore Interiors. Further expanding his effectiveness within the building industry to control both costs and quality, he learned quickly the value of establishing long standing relationships with locally known suppliers, trades and vendors.

After years of continually perfecting his craft as the founder and owner of McAmis Homes, Scott strives for creating and building a high caliber custom home in concert with the homeowner, architect and interior designer. At every stage of construction he is well adept with site selection, floor planning, procurement, construction management and long term warranty.
